A Simple French Grammar Lesson

In French, every noun is either masculine or feminine.

This affects the words that go with it, like articles (the words for “the”) and adjectives (describing words).

When a noun is feminine, the adjective often adds an e at the end.

Examples:

le chat noir → masculine (“the black cat”)

la chatte noire → feminine (“the black cat”)

The meaning stays almost the same, but the spelling changes to match the gender of the noun.
